Third Ward

This tree-lined neighborhood, nestled between the downtown and the university campus, recalls a prosperous Eau Claire at the end of the nineteenth century.

Once the City's most prestigious neighborhood, the Third Ward was home to successful business and professional leaders, including lumber barons, bankers, politicians, lawyers, doctors and architects. Although a number of the earliest homes have been demolished, several impressive examples of late nineteenth century architecture remain, reflecting the wealth and accomplishments of their owners. Other houses in the area, though not as grand, were certainly substantial and stylish residences.

The Third Ward Historic District, which includes a large portion of the neighborhood, has as its focal point four exceptional Queen Anne houses located on Oakwood Place. Architecturally, the district provides an impressive array of styles from the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

The Roosevelt Avenue Historic District is a small concentration of large-scale residences that display a variety of architectural styles and retains good integrity. Built in the late 1920s and 1930s, two of the residences within this district are individually eligible for the National Register.
